Presidents' Messages

As I write this message for the Summer 2011 issue of Lasting Connections, we are busy preparing to celebrate our 44th Annual Convocation ceremonies. It is always my pleasure to congratulate our newest grads and welcome them as alumni of Loyalist College.

There has been much to celebrate this past year, including the completion of the Sustainable Skills, Technology and Life Sciences Centre and the Student Link Lounge. The Link Lounge, a student government initiative, is a 6,135 square-foot student space made possible through financial support from full-time students. Features include a hydration station, media wall, three study pods for group work and meetings, and a living wall of plants. This is another example of an excellent leadership initiative by our Loyalist Student Government. Student leaders of this year and the year past have built on the legacy of previous student governments at Loyalist, known for their leadership in planning and implementing new development and renewal of areas in and around the College. The students worked closely with architects, construction companies and College staff to design, build and furnish the Link for their fellow students. We continue to express our sincere appreciation to our student leaders, past and present, for their exceptional leadership which has resulted in a unique space that is as beautiful as it is functional.

Construction of the Sustainable Skills, Technology and Life Sciences Centre is also complete. At the time of this writing, the College Community is looking forward to the Grand Opening celebration of this state-of-the-art centre of excellence for technology, life and environmental sciences, and trades training. Check out the Loyalist College website to view photos of the grand opening celebration.

Although construction of the building is complete and classes are underway in many of the shops, we continue to look for support to help to optimally equip the Skills Centre. Information about how you can help will be available on our website at loyalistcollege.com.

It is a pleasure to share student, grad, staff and alumni successes with you through this publication. I invite you to keep in touch, share your good news, and remember that you are always welcome at Loyalist College.

Have a great summer!

I am pleased to welcome you to the spring 2011 issue of Lasting Connections – the magazine that helps Loyalist College alumni stay in touch and up-to-date with all the important news, events, and accomplishments associated with their alma mater.

Becoming alumni of Loyalist College is an important aspect of graduating. Those of us who become members of the Alumni Association are proud to volunteer our time, talent and treasure to ensure the Association meets its constitutional objectives of encouraging and developing mutually beneficial professional relationships between current students and alumni, acting as ambassadors for the College, promoting and encouraging current students and alumni to fully participate in social and professional development activities, and contributing to the growth and prestige of the College.

Over the years, the Association has worked hard to accomplish its objectives through successful promotional events for current students. My goal, during my two-year term as President of the Alumni Association, is to increase the number of events for current students to one event per semester. And, I'm pleased to report that the Alumni Executive will be working to promote the development of Alumni chapters.

The Loyalist College Alumni Executive encourages all Loyalist Alumni to participate in any way you can. Whether you volunteer to help out at an event, act as a guest speaker in one of the classrooms, or make a donation to a capital campaign or annual award fund – you will thoroughly enjoy the sense of pride that comes with volunteering your time, talent, and treasure for future members of the Loyalist College alumni family.

The Sustainable Skills, Technology and Life Sciences Centre

By Luc Fournier

A lot of new things are happening at Loyalist College.

Construction of the College's long anticipated Sustainable Skills, Technology and Life Sciences Centre (SSTLSC) is now complete. The SSTLSC will ensure that a new generation of Loyalist students will grow and prosper through an educational experience with an emphasis on social consciousness and environmental responsibility.

"This project has been in the works for some time, long before the groundbreaking ceremony was held on November 12, 2009," states Project Manager Kirk Fleming. The total construction time for this addition will be about 1.5 years.

At a cost of approximately $16.6 million, the new addition will provide much needed space for current Loyalist programs and help bring in new programs in the near future. New programs being considered include Aviation, and Truck and Coach, both of which will benefit from the additional space offered by the new facility.

Funding for the SSTLSC was provided by the Federal Government through the Knowledge Infrastructure Program (KIP) and by the Provincial Government through the Ontario 2009 Budget. The funding covered the building materials and contractor costs; however, most of the equipment needs will require support funding from our surrounding communities and other donors.

"The new space will provide a unique opportunity to bring the teachings up-to-date," explains Karen Holder, Coordinator of the Biosciences Programs. Along with the up-and-coming new equipment, the Bioscience faculty hope to bridge the gap between program studies and the workplace. It will help streamline teaching techniques, with hybrid classrooms that are also functional as scientific labs—all in one space. With dedicated spaces for specific labs, and integrated teaching spaces, the students will be better prepared when they graduate with much more practical, hands-on techniques ready-made for the working world.

The addition includes a personalized space designed specifically for students to hang out, relax and take a break. The new Link Lounge, so called because it links the Kente Building to the Skills

Centre, includes study rooms and a live green wall made entirely of living species of plants.

The Sustainable Skills, Technology and Life Sciences Centre has been designed and constructed to qualify for Silver LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) certification. LEED certification is an internationally recognized, third party verification system that certifies a building was designed and built using strategies to improve performance in energy savings and water proficiency among other things. The Link's green wall, along with other green upgrades—such as the heat recovery system on the HVAC unit and the storm water management system—will help make LEED certification possible.

Although construction is complete, many of the new equipment requirements have yet to be fulfilled. Loyalist will be looking to the outside community for support in funding its capital equipment list so that it can run at its maximum potential.

New programs being considered include Aviation, and Truck and Coach

Past and present members of the Loyalist College Student Government are pictured in front of the Living Wall in the newly opened Student Link Lounge.

Introducing the Link Lounge – A Stunning New Student Space

The Student Government officially opened a stunning new student space on April 15. The Link Lounge, which links the original Kente building with the College's new Sustainable Skills, Technology and Life Sciences Centre, was made possible through student paid facilities enhancement fees. It is the Student Government's largest facilities enhancement project to date and features:

- Seating for over 100 students
- Lounge seating area in front of a Living Wall
- Open study areas
- Laptop counter
- Glass-walled study pods for student group work and meetings
- The Pit – a sunken lounge area
- Hydration Station – the College's sixth water bottle refill station initiated by the Student Government

With students' feedback gathered from online surveys, the Student Government worked with an architecture firm, construction company, and College staff to create this welcoming and vibrant space. The Link Lounge has been designed to achieve LEED certification through various sustainable design initiatives including the purchase and use of durable furniture and materials to promote longevity.

Vice-President Student Life April Chamberlain is thrilled with the finished space. "The Link Lounge will be a great place for students to gather to work on projects or to just relax. The Living Wall, with the refreshing sound of water running through it, makes that area of the Lounge feel like a spa," she said.

College President Maureen Piercy attended the opening ceremonies and offered her congratulations to the students for their outstanding achievement. "The Link Lounge is a fabulous space which is the result of planning and input by students through the leadership of Student Governments since 2009. The result, which we are celebrating today, is stunning!"

Five short years proved to be all the time needed for the Loyalist College Men's Rugby Team to claim top honours.

By Luke Leoen

Once again, Loyalist College celebrated a very successful season. They won bragging rights after capturing an impressive second back-to-back Ontario Colleges Athletic Association (OCAA) Division II Men's Rugby championship title this past fall. They found themselves facing a former rival on the rugby pitch. They were playing against the Georgian College Grizzlies for the second year in a row after the Grizzlies made the move down from Division I. As in the previous year, both teams stood strong atop the Division II standings. As history prevailed, Loyalist came out in the end on top of a tight and hard fought game. This fierce performance has proven that the Loyalist Lancers are a force to be reckoned with.

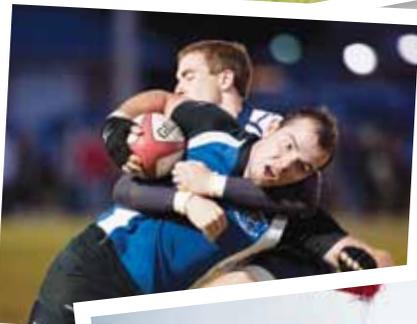

This wasn't always the story for the Lancers here at Loyalist College. Believe it or not, only a short five years ago Loyalist's track record on the pitch was less than glorious. The first two seasons for the Lancers weren't as successful as they would have wanted, with the seasons ending with a 1-6-0-1 record in 2006 and 2007.

Coaching was certainly not the cause of the team's problems on the field as Coach Larry Cook, a former member of the Queen's University rugby program, recalls. Larry's ethics for coaching on and off the field are passed from player to player and other coaches across the league.

Recruiting was the missing key, but it's hard to recruit players to a program that isn't performing and competing for the division title every year. However, by 2008, with some good recruiting strategies, Cook was able to bring in some exciting young players that knew how to play the game. With this new talent, Loyalist climbed the ranks and finished a great season by placing second to St. Lawrence College in the championship game.

The Quinte region is well known for its ability to produce stellar rugby players, and having close connections to local high school programs and club teams has made the hunt for players much easier. Good recruiting has played an instrumental part in the success of the Loyalist Lancers team through the 2009 and 2010 seasons.

The Lancers will look to add to their winning streak in 2011 by winning the title for a third consecutive year. With the large number of returning players, along with Larry Cook's coaching and recruiting methods, it sure seems that the task won't be too far out of reach for the Lancer team. The league will get a little bit of a shake up next season with Algonquin College being added into the Division II pool, as well as the return of strong Georgian and St. Lawrence squads. All in all, the 2011 season will be an interesting and action-packed year for rugby.

Turn Your Diploma into A Degree

Loyalist has over 80 transfer agreements with universities across Canada and abroad. These agreements facilitate admission to degree programs by establishing credit for your accomplishments at Loyalist.

What does this mean for you?

- Recognition of the value of your Loyalist diploma.
- Completion of a degree in a shorter length of time.
- Less expense.
- Enhanced career opportunities.

Here's what some of our graduates have to say about turning their diploma into a degree.

It was during my first year at Loyalist that I learned about the articulation agreement the College has with Royal Roads University in Victoria, B.C. I knew that I wanted to continue my post-secondary studies and obtain a degree. This agreement provided the perfect opportunity for me to do so. Royal Roads gave me two years of credit for the two-year Environmental Technology program I completed at Loyalist. Within one year I had earned my Bachelor of Science.

This sequence of events was exactly what I needed. The hands-on training, small class sizes and phenomenal faculty at Loyalist gave me invaluable experience and confidence in myself. I was prepared for university when I moved to B.C. It felt good to know that Royal Roads respected my college accomplishments and recognized them with advanced standing.

Reaching my personal goal of graduating from college and university feels great – and there have definitely been other benefits. I have found that employers view the college and university combination as a strong asset – leading to employees who are solid in theory and practice, yet not afraid to roll up their sleeves and get the job done. Best of all, I have a job that I love and I didn't have to incur four years of university debt to obtain my degree.

Royal Roads University, Bachelor of Science 2008

It was during my third year in the Television and New Media Production program at Loyalist that I began to consider the possibility of continuing on to university. Loyalist had prepared me to enter the workforce – university was something that I wanted to do, not needed to do. My research led me to Wilfrid Laurier University's Brantford campus.

The interdisciplinary honours degree they offer in Contemporary Studies felt right for me. I was given advanced standing for my Loyalist studies – 7.5 of the 20 credits required – which has made a significant difference to me, both financially and in regard to my time commitment. These factors are important. My family is in Belleville so I am eager to reach my goal and be able to spend more time at home.

This semester I created a short documentary for one of my classes. Several of my journalism professors recognized my skills and asked where I had studied before – these professors work for National Geographic, CNN and CBC. I told them about Loyalist. I felt very proud.

I want to produce social documentaries. I'm confident that my university studies in current events, politics, philosophy, technology and media will add depth and impact to these initiatives. My positive Loyalist experience encouraged me to continue my studies and I definitely feel that this post-secondary combination is the right choice for me.

Spring Awards Presentation at Loyalist College

The Undergraduate Spring Awards Reception in The Parrott Centre at Loyalist College on Wednesday, March 9th was a happy occasion for donors, students, faculty, staff and guests of the College as 50 students were presented with awards that totaled $38,650.

In her opening remarks, College President Maureen Piercy congratulated the award recipients and expressed appreciation for the work of the Loyalist College Foundation in providing support to students. Many of the awards made available to students throughout the year are provided by the endowment fund for student financial assistance, which is administered by the Foundation.

Donna Gowthorpe, Chair of the Foundation's Grants Committee, welcomed everyone on behalf of the Foundation and the Grants Committee of the Board. "We know that financial assistance makes a difference for many of you as you continue with your post-secondary education – and that's why we're involved. Thank you to our many donors for your generosity – and our warmest congratulations to all award recipients."

Donors were recognized and thanked by Stuart Wright, Chair, Loyalist College Board of Governors, who commented on the "incredible generosity of people who have stepped forward with contributions." He explained that, through forward thinking and planning, donors are not only helping students of today but also endowment funds continue to provide financial assistance to Loyalist students on an annual basis.

Returning to school after age 50

By Wayne Carruthers

Heading back to the classroom at the impressionable age of 50 comes with a unique set of challenges and a few delightful rewards. For some, heading back to school as a mature student doesn't seem practical; however, as colleges and universities continue to see a rise in the enrolment of older students, it seems the practicality has taken a back seat to the benefits of continued and enhanced education. Whether it's a planned change of career, or an interest in learning something new, hitting the books at 50 makes the challenge of stepping out of one's comfort zone a valuable choice.

Loyalist College programs, ranging from Accounting to Nursing and various Biosciences programs, are popular choices for mature students. The one-year post-diploma programs are designed for learners who want to breathe new life into an existing diploma or degree by brushing up on current skills and adding new skills. Gloria Fletcher, a student in the Public Relations program, enthusiastically offers her insights. "As a retiree from the military, this program has given me a fresh perspective on the working world, stretching the concept of what I am able to do as a person and giving me the confidence to realize that I still have much to offer. The College itself is a huge benefit as it provides a permanent support for your professional life. Knowing that the Career Centre is always going to be there for assistance, and knowing that the professors will be available to you even after you are done, is huge."

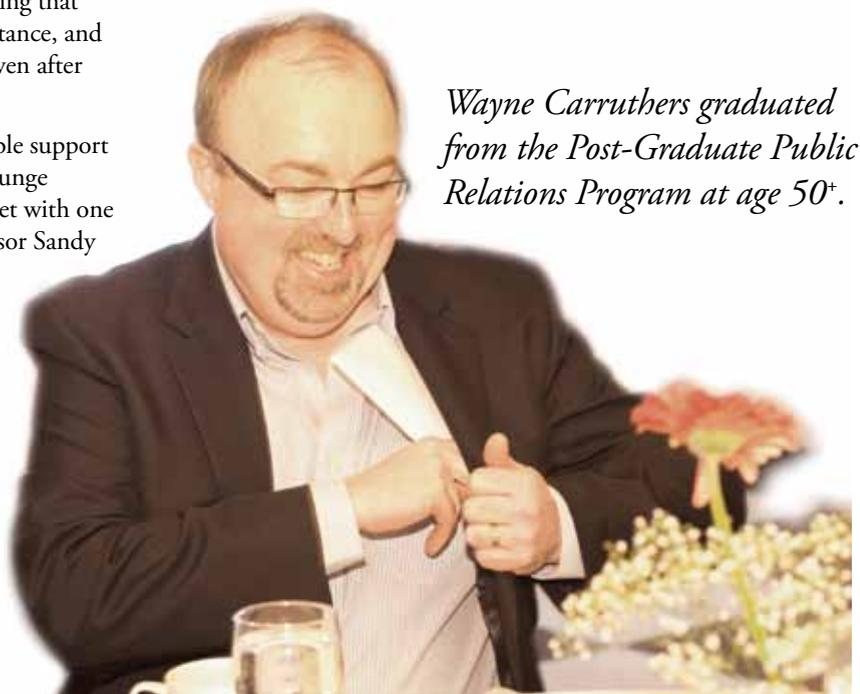

Loyalist College does offer a comfortable and incredible support system to its mature students. The mature student lounge provides a relaxed atmosphere where students can meet with one another, a student mentor, or the Second Career advisor Sandy Novroski.

"Students who are returning to Loyalist through the Second Career program bring a mature perspective and a spirit of determination to succeed," explains Sandy. "What I love most about my job of 28 years is seeing students focus and attain their goals – it's exciting."

If you're considering a return to school to upgrade your current credentials or to start fresh with a new career, the following questions, concerns, and helpful information – provided by several mature students – will be of interest.

- Can I afford the time? This is an important consideration. For every hour of class-time instruction, you will need to find an hour for reading, study, and research. Twenty hours in the classroom requires another 20 hours of work – it's a full-time job.
- Can I afford the tuition? Financing your education can be an issue. Loyalist College's Financial Aid is here to help you connect with information about loans, grants, or bursaries.
- Am I too old to learn? It is a proven fact that adult learners perform at least as well as traditional-age students. There are thousands of 50-plus aged students enrolled in higher education programs.
- Can my family survive without me? Returning to school is an opportunity to help you as well as your family to become self-sufficient – they will get along without you. Remember, you are not abandoning them – you are becoming a positive role model while enhancing your earning potential.
- I will be 50-plus when I graduate. You'll have a birthday every year, anyway. Why not spend those birthdays doing something great for yourself?
- Fear. Who isn't afraid on the first day of any experience? Your fears and nerves will likely take a back seat to the excitement of being a student but, if you need an ear, the Mind & Wellness Services staff are available to listen and provide support.
- Finally, be prepared – in some programs – to be older than the faculty. You may have the opportunity to bring your lifelong learning to an exhilarating youthful atmosphere.

How do I know all of this? I am enrolled in a Post Diploma program and I am one of 85 full-time students at Loyalist College who is 50 or older – and this has been my best personal development year to date. To paraphrase my contemporaries, "Loyalist Rocks."

Wayne Carruthers graduated from the Post-Graduate Public Relations Program at age 50+.

Minister of National Defence Peter MacKay (L) and MP Prince Edward-Hastings Daryl Kramp were pleased to attend the February 18th celebration of the opening of the Victoria Cross Library in Ameliasburg, Ontario.

James Chambers (centre), Director of the 7th Town Historical Society looks on as Loyalist President and Honorary Colonel Maureen Piercy congratulates Ian Reilly (far right) for bringing the Victoria Cross Library to Ameliasburgh.

The Victoria Cross Library Unveiling The Facts Behind The Men Behind The Medals

By Nadja Pierce

Lt. Rutherford was a good distance in advance of his men when he saw a strong enemy assault force ahead. He signalled to the enemy to come over to him and they in turn waved to him to join them. He bravely did so and managed to convince the enemy that they were surrounded. This bluff took colossal nerve, and as a result the whole enemy troop, consisting of 47 men, surrendered to him that day. This act of bravery was an inspiration to the men he served with.

Lt. Charles Smith Rutherford was awarded the Victoria Cross in November, 1918.

“If you’re going to do a job, do it to the best of your ability.” These are the wise words of Ian Reilly, a long time friend of Loyalist College. Judging by his great accomplishment in bringing the Victoria Cross Library to Canada, his words mirror his intent and actions.

Ian, and the many others he credits with helping him with the Victoria Cross Library project, are unsung heroes. The Library is a compilation of stories about Victoria Cross recipients. Along with ensuring the ongoing documentation and preservation of the stories of gallantry by those exceptional individuals, the Library has aroused a renewed sense of pride in their heroic accomplishments.

Ian and his wife Bev have been instrumental in bringing to existence the Victoria Cross Library, housed in the Marilyn Adams Genealogical Research Centre in Ameliasburgh, Ontario.

Ian Reilly is the President of the Seventh Town Historical Society, and an avid lover of history. Ian felt it important to have a centre where all Victoria Cross recipients and their stories could be kept safe and made public to anyone interested in the heroes behind the medals.

The unveiling of the Victoria Cross Library, “The Facts Behind The Men Behind The Medals”, was celebrated on Friday, February 18, with the kind of pomp that included a Town Crier and a piper to announce the arrival of honourable guests.

“This is a truly historic day for Canada,” Ian said, “To have these important records here in a little place in Prince Edward County. It is the only place in Canada like this. The only other one is in Chester, England.”

Among those in attendance were the Honourable Peter MacKay, Minister of National Defence; Daryl Kramp, M.P. Prince Edward-Hastings; Peter Mertens, Mayor of Prince Edward County; Belleville Mayor Neil Ellis; Honorary Colonel Maureen Piercy, President of Loyalist College; Colonel Dave Cochrane; the Victoria Cross Families (descendants of Victoria Cross recipients), who received copies of their descendants’ Library Records; Military representatives; and, other honoured guests.

Loyalist Media Studies students were also on site to film and photograph the event and assist in creating information packages to help promote the continued expansion of the Victoria Cross Library.

“This library of information is an important part of acknowledging these heroes and their accomplishments,” said Colonel Cochrane. “Keeping their stories of passion and commitment alive ensures that their brave deeds are recorded and not forgotten. These men have allowed us to be able to follow our dreams without reservations.”

“When one thinks of genealogy, one thinks of records mostly of the dead,” said Ian, “But in fact it is for the living and it is a growing field. When people hear of the Library, they are going to start going through closets, drawers and letters to find records of these heroic individuals who must be honoured. The connection will be made that these were real people with real lives whose families continue on because of their brave deeds.”

Ian Reilly is more than a great historian who has worked tirelessly to bring the Victoria Cross Library to the Marilyn Adams Genealogical Research Centre. Ian has also been a part of Loyalist College since its inception. He served on the Board of Governors for eight years and was a founding member of the Loyalist College Foundation where he served for nine years before being made an honorary member.

“I was there the day they laid the cornerstone,” Ian said. “I was there long before the Pioneer building, since the early days. When you stay in residence at Loyalist we like to think you’ll be staying at Ian and Bev’s” (a reference to the residence building gifted by the Reilly’s and aptly named Reilly Hall). It’s important to give back to the community. That is living and growing.”

In August, 1942, Honorary Captain John Weir Foote was Regimental Chaplain with the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry. During a period of eight hours, under heavy enemy fire, Captain Foote not only helped the medical officer in administering aid to the wounded men, he left his shelter over and over again to help. He continued without fear or any apparent regard for his own safety, and because of his brave actions he saved the lives of many men who would have otherwise perished. Those who observed his heroism that day claim that the scene of Captain Foote collecting the wounded from the beach would forever be etched in their minds.

Honorary Captain John Weir Foote received the award of the Victoria Cross in February, 1946.

Enhanced Lab Facilities Benefit Health and Human Studies Students

On March 21st, an open house was held at Loyalist College to showcase a new lab and significant facility renovations in the Schools of Health and Human Studies. Students in the Developmental Services Worker, Personal Support Worker, Practical Nursing and Nursing programs will benefit from training in a state-of-the-art learning environment, using progressive techniques to prepare for the workforce.

Stuart Wright, Chair of the Loyalist Board of Governors, said that this initiative is a testimony to the importance of innovation at the College. “To see this concept put into practice and for our partners in the Quinte region to step forward to help make this happen is absolutely splendid. Congratulations.”

“We were fortunate to receive support from many sources,” added Karen Brooks Cathcart, Dean of Health and Human Studies. “The funding to create the additional lab came from College operating funds. Mike Roy and Wayne Mancuso from Bardon’s Supplies and Bathworks donated the lab apartment’s bathroom fixtures, and the washer and dryer were contributed by Paul Tilley of Crossborder Solutions.

Julie Rivers, Loyalist’s Simulation Specialist, was instrumental in the planning and execution of this initiative. She is internationally known for her expertise in simulation training and the College benefits tremendously from her continued growth and development in this field. We are always in search of ways to improve the students’ learning experience. We are confident that these newest changes will contribute to their success.”

QUENCHING THIRST and Minimizing Waste

By Adrienne Barrie

Bottled water has been described as “one of the greatest cons of the 20th century.” Since improper recycling of plastic bottles is cause for an environmental nightmare, Loyalist College took action this year to help save the earth – one plastic bottle at a time.

Despite cities like Belleville having recycling facilities, it is estimated that 650 million water bottles are being thrown into Ontario landfills every year. By early May of this academic year, more than 132,704 plastic water bottles have been saved from landfills because Loyalist students and staff are using the new “hydration stations” that have been installed around the College campus to fill their reusable water bottles.

The idea of hydration stations came from Loyalist’s initiative to be more environmentally-friendly. A hydration station was in the plans for the new Link Lounge – the area that links the current College building with the newly constructed Sustainable Skills, Technology and Life Sciences Centre. The Student Government Board liked the idea and recognized the need for reducing the amount of water bottles the College consumes. The Student Government then decided to install a few other stations around the campus.

At the beginning of the year, the Student Government partnered with the College to provide refillable water bottles to all staff and students.

There has been tremendous positive response to the initiative. Walking the halls of the College, students and staff everywhere are holding the red and blue refillable water bottles.

“The hydration stations were so well received, more stations were installed midway through last semester,” beamed Ryan Scott, President of the Loyalist Student Government. “The exact number of bottles saved can be seen on the digital counter on each station; it is a substantial amount and it is always increasing.”

As many students and staff opted to fill reusable bottles at the College’s hydration stations, more than 132,704 plastic water bottles have been saved from landfills this academic year.

Having the number of bottles saved visible to everyone who uses the stations is a great way to illustrate to users how much they are making a difference by doing something so simple.

It’s a great way to get people involved in caring for the environment.

If the student body at Loyalist can have this much impact on reducing water bottle waste, think of how many water bottles would be saved if cities across Ontario joined the initiative and made the change.

Bottled water costs range between $0.25 and $2 per bottle but tap water costs less than one cent. By using a reusable water bottle and filling it at the hydration stations, Loyalist students and staff are able to get refreshingly cold, filtered drinking water at zero cost.

Loyalist Rotaract Makes Fundraising Fun

The College's Rotaract group organized a Dodgeball Tournament and raised over $200 for the Rotary PolioPlus program to eradicate polio. Approximately 60 people participated in the tournament.

Josh Summers, a third-year Animation student and Rotaract President said, "The tournament was a lot of fun and a great way to encourage people to become involved with such a worthwhile cause."

Empty Bowls Fundraiser a Huge Success

Loyalist President Maureen Piercy is pictured with members of Students in Free Enterprise (SIFE) at the Empty Bowls event, a fundraiser for local food banks hosted at Loyalist on March 26th. Strong community support resulted in close to $3,000 being raised for the Quinte Regional Food Share Shelter (QRFSS), a collective of local food banks. Guests purchased bowls donated by local potters, then filled them with delicious soups prepared by Loyalist's Chef Drew Ferguson and Dinkel's restaurant.

Holocaust Survivor Addresses Loyalist Students

Respect, acceptance, and social responsibility were key elements in a powerful presentation to Loyalist College Centre for Justice Studies students on March 22nd. Eva Olsson, an 86-year-old Holocaust survivor, spoke of the horrors she and her family experienced in the concentration camps. Students expressed their appreciation for being given the opportunity to hear Ms. Olsson's positive and inspirational message of tolerance and acceptance.

Junior Iron Chef Championship

Students Enjoy Alcohol-Free Fun at Luau

An alcohol-free evening complete with grass skirts, leis and fruity mocktails, was a huge success and thoroughly enjoyed by students from many different programs. Hosted by Loyalist College and community partners, the main goal of the Luau was to show guests that alcohol does not have to be a part of a fun event. The evening included games, a hula contest and coconut races.

International Support Worker Students Host Fundraiser

The International Support Worker (ISW) students hosted a successful fundraiser this past January at the Belleville Club. The students planned the event as a project for their studies in fundraising for international causes. Guests enjoyed a silent auction, dinner and musical entertainment.

The students spent five weeks in Mexico where they learned about participating in community development in places where people are living in very difficult surroundings.

Athletes of the Year

On March 23rd Loyalist College celebrated the excellence of its athletes and coaches at the 43rd annual Athletic Banquet. Brittany Gray, a varsity volleyball player, was named Female Athlete of the Year. Sean McMurtry, a member of the men's rugby team, was presented with the Male Athlete of the Year award.

Food and Beverage Show

The Junior Iron Chef competition, which was organized by the Loyalist College second-year Culinary Management students, was held in conjunction with the Food and Beverage Show. First-year Loyalist students won the cake decorating contest. The show included representatives of local food, wine and tourism industries who provided product information and delicious food samples for those attending.

Loyalist Open House

Loyalist College staff members were all smiles as they welcomed visitors to the College's Spring Open House on Saturday, April 16th. Visitors had the opportunity to explore the campus, talk with faculty, meet current students and attend a parent information session.

Coming Back to Loyalist

By Michael Walls-Kelly

Wayne Cowan enjoyed his time at Loyalist College so much that he made the choice to enroll twice – 37 years apart.

“I said to my instructors that I may come back again and asked them if they’ll be working here in 37 years,” Wayne joked.

Wayne is a graduate of two Loyalist College programs. He received his diploma in Accounting in 1973. In 2010, Wayne completed the Paralegal program and went on to write his licensing exam with the Law Society of Upper Canada (LSUC). Only a few colleges offer a paralegal program that is recognized and approved by the LSUC and Loyalist’s program is one of them.

Wayne believes that the faculty at Loyalist were a major factor in his ability to obtain the license. “They knew it inside and out,” Wayne said. “They encouraged us to take the exam and prepared me to take it, they really did.”

After graduating in 1973, Wayne put his Accounting diploma to good use in the Toronto area. He worked in the city for four years, but eventually realized he wanted to make a change. “It wasn’t an environment that I liked,” Wayne said. “So I moved back here.”

Wayne then got an accounting job with Kenron Estates and Bayview Estates where he worked for 22 years as the office manager, bookkeeper and accounting clerk. On-the-job duties he learned as he worked included real estate transactions, lease agreements and contracts with subcontractors. After handling all of these things he decided to obtain credentials in the paralegal field.

Wayne is currently working in production at Halla Climate Controls. “Although I’m not employed directly in my field yet, I continue to stay persistent and positive,” Wayne said.

Wayne’s positive attitude helped him in school as well. When he graduated from the Paralegal program at Loyalist, he was on the Dean’s List and received the Law and Security Administration Faculty Award, an award given for “Superior Attitude, Academics and Aptitude in the Law and Security Administration Program,” two things that make him proud to this day. He was pleased that the faculty chose to give him the award as he considers them part of what makes Loyalist great.

“All of my instructors were friendly. They never looked down on the students. They all had practical experience in the fields in which they were teaching,” explains Wayne. “They weren’t just academics. That’s what made the whole thing so relevant for me. They could cite actual incidents in their working lives.”

The faculty, as well as the constant expansion and updating of facilities, are reasons why Wayne doesn’t hesitate to recommend Loyalist to others.

Throughout Wayne’s interesting life travels he’s had his wife, Susan, as a companion. They have two grown children – a son named Jeremy who lives with his wife and two sons in Edmonton, Alberta, and daughter, Teri-Lynn, who lives with her husband and son in Portsmouth, England. Wayne’s entire family has interests that are as varied and adventurous as his own – which is something that he loves.

Overall, Wayne’s educational experiences at Loyalist, though decades apart, were very similar. The courses and the instructors made him feel at home. And, like any good home, he’s always welcome back.

Kaela Lalonde

An Outstanding Student Stands Out

When Kaela Lalonde decided that she would pursue a career in science, she knew she would also have to determine how to best make that happen. Should she work toward a college diploma in science and technology, or a BSc from a university? Always the researcher, Kaela did her homework and decided that Loyalist College would provide her with the education she needed to pursue her chosen career.

The outcome of that decision is that she has already made a significant impact in the world of science!

A Biofood Technology graduate, Kaela completed her third-year placement with Environment Canada in the Emissions Research and Measurement Division (ERMD) in Ottawa. Her laboratory skills and analytical acumen were so impressive she was hired on a contract basis by Health Canada immediately following her 2007 graduation.

As a member of the Bisphenol A (BPA) research team, Kaela contributed to the lab work which ultimately showed that BPA can leach into aqueous and acidic foods and beverages. A study, co-authored by Kaela, was published in 2009 in the peer-reviewed journal Food Additives and Contaminants, and led to Canada becoming the first country in the world to ban BPA from baby bottles.

“It was great to be a part of the BPA research team,” said Kaela. “BPA was such an emerging chemical of great concern and our mandate as a governmental agency is to respond to the public’s concerns.”

“Kaela and I had some interesting conversations when she was taking my courses,” said Karen Holder, Loyalist’s coordinator for Biosciences. “She was an excellent student while at Loyalist. I recall her saying that she had been warned against pursuing a community college education over a BSc. Fortunately for us and for Health Canada, Kaela chose Loyalist.”

When asked what advice she would give to a Loyalist College Biotechnology student, Kaela’s response was, “Take advantage of the knowledge around you – the faculty members are the greatest tools you have. They are easy to approach and always willing to help you out and give you the extra push you need. Their knowledge and expertise can help you go places!”

Now a full-time employee with Health Canada, Kaela continues her research work and has co-authored other papers on food contaminants. Reflecting back to her time as a Biotechnology student, she explained that, “My Loyalist College experience was made positive by the people who surrounded me.”

“Class size allowed for more individual attention and a closer connection with classmates and faculty. The program itself is closely linked to industry and encompasses a wide range of areas in the bioscience field. Loyalist provided me with all the necessary tools I needed to succeed in my chosen career.”

Respect – a Way of Life at Loyalist

By Mandy Junop

Respect – Pass it on. This phrase took on an especially poignant meaning when I was the recipient of a good deed from a stranger.

While buying lunch in the cafeteria one day, I unknowingly dropped a fairly substantial amount of money on the floor. A young man saw this occur, came up to me and handed my money back to me. I mentioned that he could have taken the cash and no one would have known. His response to that was, “That’s not the way I live my life.”

Respect means different things to different people. Just a glance at the Respect wall displayed during Respect Week, shows how opinions differ from person to person. Students were asked to write what respect means to them and post it on a wall in the cafeteria. Responses included things such as

We had a great time carrying out small acts of kindness. We truly believe that it is the small things that end up having the largest impact!”

The campaign was originally driven by the College’s Human Resources Services and Organizational Development department. All Colleges require a policy on harassment and bullying; however, the creation of the Respect Committee at Loyalist College goes beyond simply having a policy in place.

“We are already very fortunate to have, for the most part, a very positive environment here at Loyalist,” Dave commented. “It is one of the reasons we’re all so passionate to be a part of this and why we enjoy working here, because we already do have this type of environment. Yet, you always need reminders.”

pass it on

common decency, equality, being tolerant, kindness, and treating people the way you want to be treated.

Respect Week, celebrated November 15 to 19, 2010, was a great success for Loyalist College. Activities included the aforementioned Wall of Respect, a speakers’ corner, an online contest and a movie marathon.

The campaign was very visible on campus during Respect Week. Banners, t-shirts, bracelets, classroom visits and the series of events that took place, made it hard to miss the efforts of the Respect Committee.

“We tried to make the campaign visible to every person in the College Community,” explained Dave Templar, Residence Coordinator and Men’s Volleyball Coach. Dave is also a member of the Respect Steering Group who worked to, among other things, plan events like the one carried out at the Quinte Mall and Shoppers Drug Mart this spring. Dave, along with a small group of students, carried out Random Acts of Kindness by greeting shoppers and helping them with their bags. As Dave reported, “The week was a wonderful opportunity to start laying the groundwork for the future of the Student Respect Crew.

While respect has always been prevalent on campus, this proactive approach to eliminating bullying and harassment has been noticeable.

“It is little things here and there,” said Dave. “People opening the door for each other, being mindful of who is behind them, and just being more receptive, in terms of things like language.

Dave’s passion for the campaign is evident. With his drive, and the combined efforts of staff, students and faculty, the Respect campaign will surely continue to develop and grow. When asked about the desired outcome of the campaign, his response was simple, “If we continue to spread the word as best as we know how and we do so in a positive and respectful way, I don’t think the outcome can be anything but positive for the College Community.”

Many of the donors listed have directed their support to the Loyalist College Endowment Fund to provide support for students. Their generosity has resulted in total donations of $326,294, and with "enhanced" matching funds of $583,069 from the provincial government's Ontario Trust for Student Support (OTSS) program, a total of $909,363 will be added to the Endowment Fund to assist students in years to come.

Many Loyalist students rely on the financial awards that are available at the College to help them pay for their education. Ongoing support from alumni will allow us to continue to help students. Your annual support for the Loyalist Annual Fund will ensure that students today will become contributing members of society tomorrow. All gifts are gratefully received and help to make a difference to students.
